Dynamic e-business, as envisioned by several industry analysts and corporate leaders, involves the rapid teaming of companies with both familiar and new business partners in pursuit of specific market opportunities. For realizing this new generation business model, the ability to form, operate, and disband virtual enterprises will be the single-most important requirement. These short-lived, opportunity-based organizations leverage the individual capabilities of several member companies to form v ...

Current composite web service development and management solutions, e.g. BPEL, do not cater for assessing and maintaining comparability of business partners during business collaboration development and management. It is our firm belief that to realize the vision of developing business collaborations on demand and on the fly while ensuring that collaboration between participants involved can take place, business collaboration design needs to apply software development principles and at the same ...
